PRESS RELEASE

Airway Starts American Airlines Cabin Cleaning Services at JFK airport

New York, November 1, 2012: Despite Hurricane Sandy ripping through the east coast, Airway pushed forward with a successful launch of their new cabin service contract with American Airlines. Following what was considered one of the most devastating storms to ever hit the New York area, which completely shut down the airline operations for three days, messed with the mass transportation system for at least a week, Airway employees showed up in force to start a new chapter in its partnership with American Airlines.

Airway hired these cabin cleaning professionals to perform the aircraft cabin cleaning of 42 international and domestic flights arriving from the American Airlines global network. Awarded this cleaning contract early this past fall, Airway is confident it will carry on the proud tradition of industry leading, dependable and quality performance as the previous employees of American Airlines have for many years.

Airway JFK General Manager, Maurice Guericio, and his team of very qualified managers, dispatchers, supervisors, leads and enthusiastic cabin cleaners, mastered their way through early weather, transportation issues and an operational learning curve, to produce a very respectful product for the overall customer experience at American Airlines.

“All of us at Airway want to thank every employee who played a role with the launch of this very critical and successful partnership with the American Airlines team at JFK. Each person represented our company with pride and determination in the mist of personal challenges many faced at home due to Hurricane Sandy. Thank You!” – Mark DuPont, Executive Vice President.
